Lisa Hancock is the director of Restorative Communications, a company that works with community, church, and interpersonal conflict. Lisa is a mediator, communication coach, and circlekeeper. Her passion is working with youth. She performs church and congregational mediations, and workshops for the North TX Conference of the United Methodist Church.

Lisa has been trained by the Institute for Restorative Justice and Restorative Dialogue at The University of Texas at Austin and is a Defense Initiated Victim Outreach Specialist in capital murder cases. She received her mediation training from SMU's Dispute Resolution Program.

She has written and facilitated workshops for British Petroleum, YMCA, Parenting Alone, The Nelson Children's Center, Coppell Independent School District, and The Hockaday School.

In the summer of 2010 Lisa was hired by BP to travel to Southern LA in order to teach workshops to all BP Claims and Community Outreach personnel, and determine if BP was engaging in best efforts to build connections and mend stressed relationships within the communities most affected by the oil spill.
